

The Phoenix residential housing market is off to a strong start in 2016. Sales have continue to outpace 2015 while listing inventory has started to increase in recent months, to help meet buyer demand. Phoenix continues to be in a seller's market at many price points, and is experiencing an increase in home prices. It's a function of supply and demand. Low interest rates and improved economic development in the area should continue to fuel future housing growth.

HOME VALUES

If you are curious about the value of your home in today's market and wondering if now is a good time to list, visit my website to get 3 instant, automated estimates of your home's current value. Then contact me and I can share with you a full and complete evaluation after seeing your home.

Market conditions can vary greatly by price point, and also by area and specific location. In Phoenix, a seller's market exists for homes prices under $500,000, a balanced market from $500,000 to $600,000, and above $500,000 a buyer's market. Market conditions are based on the relationship of supply and demand. In a seller's market buyers will face increased competition from other buyers and a shortage of homes for sale to choose from. In a buyer's market, sellers will have more competition from other listings and face downward pricing pressure.

FINANCING YOUR HOME PURCHASE IS NOW CHEAPER AND EASIER

LOWER MORTGAGE RATES

Purchasing power and favorable home financing conditions have increased due to many factors, such as lower mortgage rates. Mortgage interest rates are below levels seen during most of the last twelve months. This creates refinancing opportunities also.

30 YEAR FIXED MORTGAGE RATES

EASING OF LENDING GUIDELINES

After the tightening of credit standards, lenders have gradually been making financing more accessible as evidenced by the lower average Fico score on closed loans. Credit scores of approved loans range from 620-850.

ECONOMIC EXPANSION FOR PHOENIX, CASA GRANDE AND YUMA

THINGS ARE HEATING UP!

Phoenix is seeing it's strongest economic growth since the recession. In fact, Phoenix job growth is even outpacing Arizona and the national average. Earlier this year, Arizona gained back all of the jobs lost during the Great Recession and projects to create 63,000 jobs by the end of 2016.
