30 YEAR FIXED MORTGAGE RATES DECREASE

While 30 year mortgage rates increased to over 4.2% over the summer, they have come down to under 3.8% and currently are at 12 month lows. A lower mortgage rate extends the purchasing power of buyers, especially with a moderate increase in home prices.

CONSUMER CONFIDENCE IMPROVES

Consumer confidence has been on the rebound since hitting a 12 month low in September 2015. The steady rate of improvement in the last 4 months means consumers are feeling better about the economy, which factors into their confidence in making big purchases, such as housing.

MARKET INSIGHTS

On the whole, 2015 was a good year for real estate in Arizona. Home sales and prices increased at a moderate rate, which bodes well for long term, sustainable growth. We expect that healthy, moderate growth to continue into 2016 based on current attractive mortgage rates and increasing consumer confidence.

Buyers should consider taking advantage of relatively low mortgage interest rates before any future increases. For sellers, even though housing is still recovering moderately, it can be a very price sensitive market, especially at mid to higher price points. Also, buyers are looking for newer or already updated homes, so condition is important. Whether you are buying or selling, use a knowledgeable professional, like a Long Realty sales associate, who can help you navigate the market dynamics.
