HOUSING MARKET TRENDS

For the overall real estate market in Tucson and southern Arizona, the Seller's Market conditions continue. The inventory of homes for sale continued to decline in 2017, while sales increased further. The shortage of listings has not been a drag on home sales, however it has contributed to a 10% increase in median price. This has created a very competitive environment, especially at lower price points. At the higher end of the market, there is still an oversupply of homes. We expect continued strength in the real estate market in 2018.

TUCSON MONTHS OF INVENTORY

Think of Tucson as a tale of 3 markets. The lower price range, especially under $350,000, has a very tight supply of inventory and high buyer demand. In a Seller's Market like this, buyers need to move quickly and offer competitively.

The range from $350,000 to $600,000 is more balanced between supply and demand.

In the luxury market, $800,000 and above, there is still an oversupply of homes for sale as compared to buyer needs. Though sales were up slightly, luxury sellers need to price very competitively to attract from the limited pool of buyers.

RECENT TAX CHANGES

There are a number of tax changes in the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act of 2017 that may affect homeowners and homebuyers. For a detailed list, visit <http://longre.biz/TheTaxCutsandJobsAct>. Some changes include:

- Doubling the standard deduction, and repeal of personal exemptions
- Mortgage interest deduction on new loans, up to $750,000 loan limit
- Limit of $10,000 on deductions for state and local taxes
- Continues existing law on exclusion of gain on sale of a principal residence

For homeowners that itemize their tax deductions, they can continue to benefit from real estate specific deductions including mortgage interest and property tax, within the limits as defined in the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act of 2017. There are many tax changes, and we recommend consulting a tax professional to learn more about your specific situation. According to the Institute on Taxation and Economic Policy, below is the average impact to families and individuals in the U.S. of the tax changes in 2019, by income range. What other impact may the tax changes have, relative to real estate?

Deductions for property taxes, and state and local income taxes are now capped at $10,000 per year. For homeowners that live in high property tax states, this new limit may increase their cost of homeownership and prompt some to consider moving to lower tax-base states, such as Arizona.

New corporate tax rate cuts may help strengthen businesses. In addition, builders may use some of their tax savings to reinvest in expanding new construction starts, catching up on a shortage of inventory to meet a growing housing demand.

Income Range	Average Income	Average Tax Change
Less than $24,090	$14,600	-$100
$24,090-$41,910	$32,900	-$350
$41,910-$66,850	$53,400	-$650
$66,850-$112,160	$86,400	-$1,040
$112,160-$239,600	$155,700	-$1,680
$239,600-$607,090	$356,800	-$7,270
$607,090 +	$2,023,900	$1,750

CHEAPER TO OWN VS RENT

The tax changes have also refocused consumers on the fundamental benefits of homeownership: building equity in owning real estate and the pride of homeownership. In many markets, like ours, rental rates have continued to increase and with mortgage rates still attractive, it is cheaper to own through financing than rent. Contact me for more information.

ROSEY'S MARKET INSIGHTS

Rosey Koberlein,
Long Companies CEO

While the net impact of tax changes is yet to be determined, the underlying fundamentals of strength in real estate remain. A strong demand for housing, a shortage of listing inventory, attractive mortgage rates, a strong stock market, a growing pool of retiring baby boomers, and promising growth in local employment will bring the local housing market continued sales and pricing growth in 2018. In fact, the National Association of REALTORS® forecasts that Arizona housing will see a 5.6% increase in 2018. Coupled with baby boomer retirement, the number of Millennials purchasing homes will continue to grow, to an anticipated 43% of total home loans in 2018. These dynamics create a demographic “bookend” of real estate activity.

BABY BOOMERS RETIRING

As the baby boomer generation ages, the number of baby boomers retiring continues to grow, which will spark further movement to fair weather locations like our area. Arizona continues to rank as one of the premier retirement destinations.

BABY BOOMERS OVER 65: 2012-2030(E)

IMPROVING EMPLOYMENT

While Tucson job growth has lagged behind the US average in recent years, job growth is forecast to grow in 2018 and beyond. Job stability and growth will bolster consumer confidence, which in turn spurs large ticket purchases such as real estate.

SHORTAGE OF LISTING INVENTORY

We remain in a Seller's Market due to low listing inventory and high demand. New construction activity in Tucson has not kept up with this demand. Thus we expect a continued shortage of inventory in 2018 and Seller's Market conditions, especially at lower price points.
