MARKET INSIGHTS

In addition to supply and demand, local real estate is influenced by other factors including interest rates, employment conditions and consumer confidence.

30 YEAR FIXED MORTGAGE RATES TICK UP

While mortgage rates had dropped late 2014 into early 2015, they increased in the second quarter to about 4.2%. This may have provided an incentive to home buyers to lock in their rates and purchase, to avoid an increase in monthly payments.

PHOENIX BOASTS BEST JOB GROWTH SINCE 2007

Source: bizjournals.com and azeconomy.org

There have been 61,400 new hires in Maricopa and Pinal counties since February 2014, according to the Arizona Department of Administration, a 3.3 percent increase. The Phoenix metro increased its workforce by 1.2 percent from January, a pace higher than the average number of new jobs created during February over the last 10 years.

CONSUMER CONFIDENCE IMPROVES

Consumer confidence is on the rise this year. What does this mean for our market? As consumers feel more confident, they are more comfortable in making large purchase decisions.

The local housing market has shown improvement in 2015. We expect for the balance of 2015 a continuation of this stability. What does this market mean for buyers and sellers?

- Buyers – better confidence in housing and the economy will mean more home buyers, and competition. Lower inventories mean slightly less choice and an uptick in prices and rates may impact affordability. Improving home values will help buyers with long term equity gains.
- Sellers – more buyers and less inventory may increase opportunities for owners to put their home on the market and attract buyers. Higher price points still lag and should be priced aggressively.

For market conditions in your neighborhood or to get a professional estimate on the current value of your home, please contact me today.

Long Realty is outperforming the market this year, helping over 4,000 people buy and sell homes in the first half of 2015. Thank you to our many clients for their confidence in our brand and sales associates.
