July 2015

Improvements in consumer sentiment and a rise in interest rates in 2015 prompted more buyers to take action, resulting in an increase in closed sales activity versus 2014. Listing inventories dipped in 2015 as the rate of sales outpaced homes coming on the market.

With an increase in sales and reduction in available inventory, Months of Inventory declined in Southern Arizona markets. Months of Inventory reflects the ratio between inventory and sales and is a good indicator of the overall health of the market. However, Months of Inventory may vary greatly by price point or specific area. Now may be an excellent time for potential sellers to bring their home on the market.

MARKET INSIGHTS

In addition to supply and demand, local real estate is influenced by other factors including interest rates, employment conditions and consumer confidence.

30 YEAR FIXED MORTGAGE RATES TICK UP

While mortgage rates had dropped late 2014 into early 2015, they increased in the second quarter to about 4.2%. This may have provided an incentive to home buyers to lock in their rates and purchase, to avoid an increase in monthly payments.

LOCAL EMPLOYMENT EXPECTED TO IMPROVE

Tucson's economic growth is expected to outpace the national economy by 2017. UA Eller Economist George Hammond says job growth in Tucson is predicted to accelerate from 0.5 percent in 2014 to 0.9 percent this year, and rise again to 1.4 percent in 2016. Job growth is expected to continue in 2017, helping to fuel Tucson's economy as it then is forecast to outpace the national economy.

CONSUMER CONFIDENCE IMPROVES

Consumer confidence is on the rise this year. What does this mean for our market? As consumers feel more confident, they are more comfortable in making large purchase decisions.

The local housing market has shown improvement in 2015. We expect for the balance of 2015 a continuation of this stability. What does this market mean for buyers and sellers?

- Buyers – better confidence in housing and the economy will mean more home buyers, and competition. Lower inventories mean slightly less choice and an uptick in prices and rates may impact affordability. Improving home values will help buyers with long term equity gains.
- Sellers – more buyers and less inventory may increase opportunities for owners to put their home on the market and attract buyers. Higher price points still lag and should be priced aggressively.
